the Chernobyl nuclear disaster in the Soviet Union. Virtually the whole of North Wales, in particular the North wates, in particular the high Snowdonia area, which suffered torrential rainfall during May 2 and 3 when the Chernobyl cloud passed over, is affected by the order. An estimated 5,000 flocks, compressing about 1250,000 comprising about 1,250,000 ewes and lambs, will be affected by the restrictions.

Last night, farmers in Wales were worried that foreign competitors, particularly New Zealand, would try to take advantage of the ban. Mr Maurice Trumper, chairman of the National Farmers' Union in Wales, said: "This is a very severe blow to the concept of better marketing. I just hope there is not a sustained reaction by the public."

Farmers in the principality were just about to embark on the biggest promotion for Welsh lamb. He intended to discuss the situation with his New Zealand counterpart and might be pressing the Government to combat any attempt to increase imports. The ban was announced by Mr Michael Jopling, Minister of Agriculture. He told the Commons the monitoring of young unfinished lambs not yet ready for the market in certain areas of Cumbria and North Wales indicated higher levels of radio-caesium than in the rest of the country. There was no need for anyone to be concerned about the safety of food in the shops, he emphasized. The Government will consider claims for compensation from any farmers who can show that their businesses have been particularly badly The ministry said yesterday that only eight cases had been found in which the level of the Meat and Livestock Commission-said. "But they should look at the contamination exceeded 1,000 bequerels a litre (a bequerel is a unit of radioactive decay). The highest level discov-ered was 4,000 bequerels, which was still well below the 10,000 bequerels established by the International Atomic Energy Anthority as constituting a health risk. However, the ministry had decided as a result of Chemobyl to carry out further monitoring in any area where levels were found to exceed 1,000 bequerels.

The most likely reason for the uptake of radio-caesium in young lambs is that, in rela-tion to body weight, they consume much higher levels of grass than other livestock. Radio-caesium is estimated to remain in an adult animal for between 30 and 100 days, but in the case of a lamb it should be no more than 25 to 50 days. Despite the ministry's assurances, there is obvious alarm among farmers, and among meat wholesalers and retailers, about the possible effects on sales.

Soviet officials.

"Clearly people are going to be concerned about the safety of what they cat," an official of relice convoy was evicted from a farmer's land at Hang-ing Langford, Salisbury, seven miles from Stonehenge, which had been closed since earlier in the day by the Netronet ministry figures, which allow a very high safety margin and which show that the Government is determined to ensure that no meat reaches the shops which could possibly consti-tute a health risk." Mr Simon Gourlay, the National Farmers' Union president, said its members were concerned about the situation and wanted the public to be confident that all lamb on sale in the shops was

Mr Gwilym Thomas, of the Farmers' Union of Wales, said: "We are very concerned that the excellent image of Welsh lamb must be protected, so we would support taking it off the market imme-diately in order to reassure consumers."

Mr Nicholas Edwards, Sec-retary of State for Wales, said that there was "absolutely no danger" from meat already in the shops. For farmers the restrictions will not be as severe a blow as if they had been imposed a month or two later. This is because many of the affected farms are in high, hilly coun-try where the lambing season is later than in the lowlands

But the mood among Welsh farmers was sombre and worried. Mr Jack Jones, who farms more than 1,000 acres of high land at Llanuwchiyn, Gwynedd, said: "I am very frightened for the future. If this ban continues, it will wipe us out Sheep farming is our life. If this land becomes poisoned, it would kill off farming in North Wales for ever." Mrs Enid Williams, wife of another farmer in the same area, said: "The end of Janeand July is our busiest period for selling lambs. We are terribly worried; as this could, drive us into debt."

There could have beeo popart of the investigation, including the interviews with Sir John and his deputy, at a sensitive time in the Province.

The Stalker team had been detailed to investigate a total of seven shootings, locluding six deaths, by RUC undercover squads in 1982. The interim report dealt mainly with the incident on November 11 in which three IRA men were killed and an incident on December 12 when two INLA men died. RUC officers later accused of the murders were subsequently all acquitted. The report was believed to recommend charges of coospiracy to pervert the course of justice and conspiracy to murder against other officers in connection with those two incidents.

But it was the killing of a boy, aged 17, and the wouod-ing of another mao in the Lurgan hay barn on Novem-ber 24 that was the most sensitive and threatened to be the most potentially damaging of the incidents.

During that inquiry Mr Stalker and his team discovered that the hay barn had been bugged hy M15 and that

Have you checked what your money is earning recently? If you've got a few hundred, or a few thousand tucked away somewhere you'll probably find it a profitable exercise to move it to the Woolwich.

To be more specific, to a Woolwich Capital Account. Our rate is now among the highest in the high street. We are offering 7.80% net p.a. which is worth 7.95% net p.a. if you leave the interest in to earn more interest. For basic rate taxpayers that's equivalent to 11.20% gross.

Those are truly exceptional figures for a no risk investment especially when you consider how simple our terms are.

The minimum investment is just $500 and there's no upper limit to the amount you can invest.

Interest is normally paid every six months but you can take it monthly if you prefer.

When you want to make a withdrawal, it's best to give us 90 days' notice. Then interest is paid right up to the last day. However, you can always have instant access if you need it. You just give up 90 days' interest.

There's one exception. If you leave over £10,000 in your account, you can make instant withdrawals without penalty subject to normal branch limits of up to £250 in cash or £30,000 by cheque.

Judge's advice on University tribute to neighbours at war novelist

Newcastle University yes-terday announced the settingup of a Catherine Cookson lectureship in molecular haematology to acknowledge gifts of more than £1 million from the novelist, who celebrated her eightieth birthday yesterday.

The post, in the university medical school, is the first to be established with funds from the foundation set up by Mrs Cookson, who suffers from a rare blood disorder.

Professor Laurence Martin, university vice-chancellor, said: "This lectureship marks the start of an entirely new scale of practical contributions by Mrs Cookson to the academic activities and to the welfare of the region."

The foundation was launched with more than £800.000 last December when Mrs Cookson, who lives in Northumberland, also handed over £90,000 for other medical projects.

The university said vesterday that a new gift of more than £160.000 had raised ber donations to more than £1

French and Brazilian scientists working in the backlands of north-eastern Brazil have concluded after more than a decade of research that human beings inhabited this region of South America as long as

33,000 years ago. The find "puts into ques-tion" existing theories about when and how sapien sapiens - or man as we know him - sr rived in the Americas, according to Dr Anne-Marie Pessis an anthropologist. For years, scientists have adhered to the theory that human beings migrated cast, from Asia via the Bering Straits, and arrived in the Americas not more then 15,000 years ago. . "Now we have to rethink all of this," Dr Pessis said.

She is a specialist in prehistoric anthropolgy, and a mem-ber of the Franco-Brazilian research team, led by the noted anthropologist and mu-ralist, Dr Niede Goudon.

The investigations centres on minerous archaeological sites, deep in the arid state of Piani, containing n series of colourful rock paintings, stone and bone tools, hearths, and other relics.

-Scientists started working in the area more than a decade ago, hat only now, after poring over 250 sites and employing carbon 14 testing in France, have they been able to confirm their presence. The paintings, discovered in natural shelters and crags of the rocky region, show scenes of hunting, human dwellings and sexual relations.

They are coloured narrative drawings, according to Dr Pessis, in which certain scenes of human activity are repeatedly associated with specific abstract geometric shapes. The researchers hope to decode the symbolic language of the illustrations and to miderstand aspects of this Stone Age culture.

Some of the paintings are as recent as 8,000 years old, but one site, Caldeirão Rodrigues contains paintings and other traces of civilization up to 33,000 years old.

These findings complement discoveries by American scienfists in southern Chile of human relics dating back 28,000 years.

The British and American Governments will soon place research contracts that could lead 10 the controversial development of supersome jump jets to succeed the Harners used by the Royal Navy and Air Force and the US Mariae

Gadaffi says he is still in control

Tripoli (UPI) - The Libyan leader, Colonel Gadaffi, in his first interview with a Western reporter since the US air raid in April, accused President Reagao of trying to kill him, and said reconciliation with the United States was impossible as loog as Mr Reagan was in office.

Lester Piggoti had one of the most satisfying moments of his racing career this week, with his first Royal Ascot winner - Cutting Blade - as a trainer. Perhaps the top-hatted Piggon will learn to love Royal Ascot after all. Back in 1954 he suffered one of the most extraordinary disciplinary actions in the history of racing after riding Never Say Die this first Derby winner) in the King Edward VII Stakes. After a spot of fairly unremarkable bumping a long way out, Piggott was suspended sine edic (in fact his licence was eventually restored on September 28 that year). He was also in-structed to leave his father and work for a different trainer, because it was believed that Keith Piggott encouraged his son's "disregard of the safety of other jockeys". The incident involved Sir Gordon Richards, a deferential sort of chap who was knighted for his services to racing. When, one wonders, will Piggott be recognised as a parfit, gentil knight?

The unwillingness of the House of Lords to accept the government's 'free speech" amendment to its Education Bill was not due to a lack of concern about what has been happening in universities and other institutions of higher education Indeed, that the amendment was out forward at all was a result of widespread public anviety, powerfully voiced in the House of Lords (Iself What the House rightly felt was that "insufficient" time had been given for the discussion of a matter of such importance and that there were good grounds for believing that the amendment, as drafted, would not prove workable and might indeed be counter-productive The critical analysis of the text by the present Vice-Chancellor of the University of Oxford, published in The Times on June 2, was particularly convincing.

There are usually deeper reasons for ineffective drafting than mere haste or carelessness. In this case I believe that all concerned have wrongly tended to see the issue as a single one to be dealt with by a single remedy. It is my contention that there are two distinct issues, although with some overlap, and that we will get nowhere unless their disunctiveness if recognized.

The first and more important matter is the notion of free speech. the right of teachers in a university to give their courses and state their views without obstruction. as a necessary part of the idea of a university and, indeed, of any institution of higher education. Without this guarantee of freedom no insuitution can claim to be taken seriously by the rest of the academic community. This free-dom must by extension, be afforded to invited visitors, whether government ministers or other responsible people whose contributions are thought by the universities to be relevant to their educational role.

The second matter, on which it is harder to be dogmatic. is how far groups of students or others should be entitled to have the mantle of academic freedom thrown over anyone they choose to invite even if, as is possible, the visitor's purpose is not primarily to contribute to academic debate

Revel: Latin America for a long time appeared to be on the fringe culturally. Is it now becoming a vual centre from which we can bes understand the political ond cultural problems of the world?

Paz: We are European but at the same time we are on the fringe. We are the heirs of the culture of Spain and Portugal that became marginal in the 18th century. Spain never really had an Enlightenment, And then we Latin Americans had a wretched 19th century; our "wars of independence" failed to modernize our countries.

But all these disadvantages became advantages when the intellectuals of Latin America turned towards Europe to assimilate its culture. We saw Europe as a whole Revel: How do you account for the contrast between the cultural success of Latin America and its relative economic and political failure?

Paz: Our economic misfortunes ipally from the role of and if his visit may exacerbate tensions within the university which may detract from its priman purpose. On the first matter, that of academic freedom of speech in its most direct sense, it is vital that universities themselves should uphold the principle involved with such support from the civil authority as circumstances may require. To interfere with a course of lectures, whether because the views expressed are unwelcome to some, or even, as in the recent case of Professor Jobn Vincent at Bristol, because there are objections to external activities by the lecturer unrelated to his teaching, must be regarded as conduct so irreconcilable with the idea of a university that its perpetrators must, after due warning, face expulsion. Such cases may be rare but this does not make them tolerable. It was interference with university freedom from the extreme right that heralded the advent of Nazism and its allied systems in pre-war Europe. It was similar interference from the extreme left that placed in jeopardy the recovery of the German university world after the degradation of the Nazi era. Other examples could be eited.

One reason for the pressure on the government to take some action is the public sense of frstration when they see university authorities apparently condoning behaviour of this kind by taking only minimum action against it. The absurdly lenient penalties imposed on those who over an entire term endeavoured to prevent Professor Vincent from fulfilling his professorial duties is only the most recent example.

the old tried ways. Fines, suspensions or postponements of degrees are neither here nor there. If someone is unfitted to hold a coveted university place, at the public's expense, he or she must surrender it and make way for someooe prepared to use it for and then ethos it they do not respect themselves. I believe that if this primary question were resolved, the other and more complicated questions to which I have referred would be easier to handle. Since student societies of various kinds form a useful if subordinate part of higher education in the broadest sense, one would want to interfere as little as possible with their choice of visitors and to protect as far as possible all those who responded to their invitations. The important thing is that any limitations on this activity or on the protection afforded should be even-handed: what cannot be tolerated is political discrimination, such as that exercised against Jewish societies what matters is the good of the institution as a whole, not some abstract notion of free speech which may or not be relevant to a

But I felt that if he came, and our Arab or other Muslim students asked to be allowed to invite anther speaker to put the pro-Palestinian case, I would not be able to refuse them. And I felt that when I was trying to build up an academic community containing Jews and Arabs, Ibos and Yorubas, Malays, Chinese and Indians from Malaysia and other disparate elements it was desirable in those early days not to encourage divisions on national, religious or other grounds. I still think I was right.

With larger and better established institutions, greater risks can be taken, and should be. Judgement is all.

The cry for suffer sanctions against South Africa is the reluge of the unthinking. A fashionable new suggestion is to cut air links. That would cripple the airlines of at least 10 African countries utterly dependent for their fuel and servicing on South Africa. The South Africans would not sustain the airlines of those countries which had asked for a ban on direct air travel to South Africa.

The front line states of Botswana, Zimbabwe, Mozambique and Zambia would be ruined without their trade with and through South Africa. Severe sanctions would damage South Africa but they would wreck the precari-ous countries nearby. South Africa would not be disposed to continue the indispensable trading conduit for black countries which had got the sanctions they demanded, however insincerely.More disinvestment would hurt blacks worse than whites.

And what are new sanctions supposed to achieve? Why would the South African government believe that harsher sanctions. once imposed would be lifted, however much reform it initiated. It has had scant recognition for the remarkable speed with which the most objectionable features of apartbeid have been dismanuled. The British government's stance of warning and advising is wiser than rushing wildly into trade ostracism. That would make the Afrikaners, proud of their history of triumphing when beleaguered. more intractable and more repres-

It is not true that most blacks and white liberals in South Africa want sanctions. Chief Buthelezi. with his six million Zulus, and Colin Eglin, leader of the Progressive Federal Party, are against them. It is painless self-indulgence for those, like Denis Healey, who would inflict hardship and suffering from a distance upon others. The Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group should not have run away just when they were making an impression on President Botha with their ideas for starting a fruitful dialogue between the conflicting parties. They showed shallowness and lack of determination and negotiating ability. Their report, which in some parts is excellent, has thus lost much utility. Despite its genuine reforms, which have shocked many whites. the South African government has not yet braced itself to accept what it knows to be true. There can be no negotiations leading to settled peace unless Nelson Mandela and his fellow political prisoners are released, the ANC is unbanned and its exiled leaders allowed to return freely to South Africa. The new National Council designed to discuss the future constitution with membership open to black leaders - is not enough. Negotianons must include the ANC. whether or not it renounces . stolence in advance. If its leaders break the law they will be subject to it. If genuine negatiations for power sharing are storted, the true following of an unbanned 'ANC diminished if it persisted in its policy of trying to establish a one-parts state by the gan. At present, as the EPG detected, President Botha's suggestions for political development are imprecise and there is no agenda. There are high risks in legalizing the ANC, which the EPG naively thought was untainted by communist influence, but the risks in trying to squash its rebeliion, by force are even greater. That might be a tempting last resort il negotiations failed to produce a fair division of political power among the various interests, of which the ANC is no more significant inan a number of others. It should not be a first resort

Unfortunately the South African government is clumsy and unsophisticated. The new state of emergency and restrictions on media reporting are examples. It was understandable that the government should wish to forestall the ANC's advertised plans to create mayhem in the townships last Monday. If it is true that in consequence the day passed with much less violence than expected it should at once have lifted the state of emergency, released those detained as a precaution and restored the media's large freedom of reporting.

Mrs Thatcher and her government have resisted the clamour for more punitive sanctions. This gives her a powerful position as a friendly adviser to President Botha, whose greatest need in a hostile world is for friends. The threats of countries like India and Zambia to leave the Commonwealth if she does not obey them are meaningless. The Commonwealth enables a number of politically unimportant countries to get an airing on the world stage, it they leave it will be their loss, not ours. But the implicatioos for South Afirica of making Mrs Thatcher an enemy would be horrific. If she turned her back the USA would promptly do the same, and so would West Germany and the rest of the EEC. Because she has been so sensible she can push South Africa in the right direction. Others, who merely prochaim hatred and seek destruction, have no influence.

And finally, let us shatter the World Cup mood with a pastoral moment. The Rev D.G. Graham. former headmaster of Dean Close School. Cheltenham, was prompted by the obtuary of "Jock" Henderson, late Bishop of Bath and Wells. to send me the tale of a match between the Gloucester Diocese Clergy XI and the Monmouth Diocese Clergy XI in the Church Times Cup, which took place at Graham's school in 1956. Henderson, as Bishop, was naturally captain. The Archbishop of Wales was his opposite number. Graham writes: "I saw Jock leave the payilion, and come across the road to my study. 'Headmaster', he said, do you possess a Crickland.'' Sure, said I, and handed him the volume. He looked up two names and gave it back to me with a sigh. It is just as I thought said he. the state in our countries. The states to which independence gave rise were the absolutisr patrimonial states of 17th-century Spain and Portugal: in which the prince governed with his servants. his slaves, and his family, regarding the realm as bis personal property. Throughout Europe and in North America revolution, or simple evolution, replaced the patrimonial state with the modern state, belonging to all. We adopted a positivist, liberal, even socialist philosophy, but underneath the inner workings remained those of the patrimonial state. The administrative and economic privileges of the Mexican bureaucracy spring from the political monopoly enjoyed by the ruling party. In order to modernize socially and economically we must first modernize political power: we must have more democracy. I see no other system.

Revel: Does it not seem to you that. among Latin American intellectuals, strictly literary modernity and the avante-garde idea in art have been replaced by their conception of political modernity, their idea that the writer is modern because he is a revolutionary militant?

Paz: The permanent revolutionary stance adopted by intellecuals - because they are not real evolutionaries - is bound up in Latin America with a career problem. In the universities and journalism it is a badge of respectability. In Mexico, the left has no real power, but it enjoys an influence out of all proportion to its actual strength because of its virtual monopoly in the field of communications, the media, the universities, and the intellectual world - all activities subsidized by the state. The paternana, Mexican state is the great protector of the left. Revel: Where does our modern obsession with decadence come from? Why is the subject broached so etteri

Paz: Who knows exacily what "decadence" means? Modernity did indeed (as the 18th century believed) free men's minds, destroy superstitions, and make possible considerable economic progress: but it left an extraordinary gap in people's awareness. There is the very great problem here of being free, the difficulty of being alone in the world - sans père, sans Dicu.

were keeping the old subversive, poetic. revolutionary faith intact. At the same time I realized that, in terms of poetics, as an artistic adventure, surrealism had run its course. But then so had our whole concept of "modern art" since romanticism. We have finished with the concept of last moderne. In this sense, modernity is over, and a new era has begun. Revel: In your book, One Earth, Four or Five Worlds, you speak of the way in which the self-critical spirit of Europe has become, as it were, perverted. For the past 20 years or so, the sole attit of European self-criticism has been, according to you, to desirov European contration. Paz: Criticism in Europe was, originally, criticism of power and of orthodoxies. In the 20th century there is suddenly a huge void. Everything that was previously Revel: And don't they ask themselves why?

Paz: Yes, they do. They are just beginning to feel the first twinges of doubt. Now they no longer talk about "the Soviet model" or "the Cuban ideal". They keep quiet, ashamed to bring that up; yet they still storm at the Americans. They see the United States as the universally guilty party, the embodiment of evil. They have transferred all their current anguish to the fiendish spectre that the US has become in their eyes.

Revel: And what of 'liberation theology", that mysterious phenomenon we in Europe find so fascinating?

Paz: The church has always been involved in the political struggles of Latin America. Today's condemnation of capitalists by the Latio American clergy is the same as the condemnation of usurers by the theologians of the Middle Ages. They still haven't understood - and this would have caused Marx much amusement that modern capitalism bears no resemblance to usury. They want to rescue the poor from their poverty, but at the same time they reject the conditions of an economy of expansion.

Revel: What conclusion do you draw from the path you have taken personally, and how do you ac count for it?

Paz: I believe I can speak for the generation of the 1930s, which has suffered simultaneously from fascism, Marxism, and revolution. I was in Spain in the 1930s. When I returned to Mexico in 1940, the literary world of Latin ference between Voltaire and Jean-Paul Sartre. In any event, I am glad that] shall be here rather than in the Aztec Stadium, where the Mexican military has been mobilized to keep a still unofficial peace be-tween ourselves - that is, the bit of ourselves represented by 3.000 ingoistic supporters - and the Argentines' counterpart, the harros hranos, a group of over-zcalous fans who make the Paraguayan defence look like benignity itself. This is one of those few occa-sions when the popular press, echoing the 1982 headlines of "Gotcha!" and the rest, is not wholly guilty of hyperbole. On two recent visits to Mexico I was made painfully aware of the national sensitivity towards the very thing that is about to take place in 36 hours' time.

The fixture in fact is rather more than a mere game of football, in the same way that a Test match between England and the West Indies is rather more than a mere game of cricket. Both have become metaphors for the greater puissance of the competing coun-

The trouble is that the two nationalist fervours over sporting attainment and territorial possession are not quite so clearly divisible as the sensible Sr Maradona (sensible, that is, until he starts ripping our back four apart), wishes to suggest. Had that been the case, then his great compatriot Osvaldo Ardiles of Tottenham Hotspur would hardly have had to hightail it back to Argentina immediately the game got rough in the Stadio Malvinas in 1982

The Football Association has apparently not asked the British embassy in Mexico City to make any special arrangements for coping with English fans during the quarter final: similarly, there has been no appeal to them or the 5.000 Argentine fans for good behaviour during the tie. One likely reason for this is that both sets of supporters have so far been remarkably good-tempered.

As if missing Maradona's point, a former president of the Ar-gentine Football Federation. Admiral Lacoste, has been saying how much he welcomes tomorrow's Anglo-Argentine confrontation, on the grounds that it would mean "a serious match between the two countries, and a chance to heal old wounds." On the first point, about the serious match. I would agree, but on the second. sadly. not. Even in the verdant suburbia to

The National Front members who are now in Mexico and inflaming the Argentines with taunts about losing another war do not have a monopoly of misplaced chauvinism,

There is really nothing new about all this, for it was at Wembley in 1966 that the shades of another war were being in voked in the interests of a new British triumph. I hope things run civilly at the Marlborough tomorrow.

A TEAM IN TIME

In the run-up to the 1983 election the Prime Minister's advisers thought that they had surpassed themselves in political cleverness. Two parallel roads were being taken to-wards the Tory manifesto. The first was a complex consultation exercise, masterminded by Sir Geoffrey Howe and involving large numbers of Conservative MPs and party apparatchiks, who might otherwise have felt neglected. The second was a simpler process, concentrated around the Prime Minister's policy unit, which was to set out what really needed to be done. When anyone in the Cabinet complained about the dangers of a radical programme, his or her attention was discreetly drawn to the Howe exercise. To frustrated radicals the message was quietly communicated that the real work was heing done hehind Sir Geoffrey's consultative smokescreen.

It was all ineffably neat. "Unfortunately it resulted in a manifesto whose lack of inspiration was matched only by a fortuitous absence of political intelligence within the main opposition party. The Government was returned massively to power with barely the minutest idea of what it was going to do with it.

In setting up a new manifesto-making group of Cabinet -ministers, under her own chairmanship, Mrs Thatcher that he stands for more than seems to have acknowledged that earlier failure. It has been widely noted - and it is certainly significant - that Mr Biffen has not been selected for the team. It is also true that Mr Tebbit's plans to be a one-man architect of the next election victory have been politely placed in the pending tray. Of much greater importance at this stage, however, is the sense of much-needed clarity that a single group under the Prime Minister's chairmanship should bring.

It will have plenty to occupy its time. Since 1983 the Conservative government has been better at exporting its ideas throughout the Western world than in developing them at home. Policies for neglected areas - particularly in the social services and education need to be developed. Even more importantly for this committee, the political conditions must be created in which those policies can flourish.

There is no doubt, for example, that Sir Keith Joseph had a vision for improved education in Britain. But he could not inspire confidence and so he could not deliver the results. Mr Kenneth Baker has the practical plausibility. But unless the Government is simply to go to the country with the best-painted bad schools in Europe, he - and his colleagues - must show into the trap of exaggerating the importance of the manifesto. One of the Government's most characteristic success has been privatisation. This was by no means clearly foreshadowed in the 1979 manifesto. Certainly no indication was given that the sale of public assets would later prove such a powerful agent of change.

But the Prime Minister had enough political will and support to push such measures through. She now needs the will and the backing of her colleagues to continue the job. In today's political climate that means a Cabinet group of the kind she has now established.

The decision has come late - maybe too late. The consequent decision about who actually runs the election campaign remains open - maybe too open. But the auguries for a development of government policy along lines that can protect past achievements and promote future ones looks better at the end of this week than it has done for many months.

very little else.

·· Spain's Socialist Party, fighting to return to power in tomorrow's general election, has proved that it can govern. as firmly as its right-wing power in December 1982, the Socialists decided that they should govern in the interests of the country as a whole, not in any sectarian interest. It is they who have therefore undergone the "cambio", the change, which was their beguiling 1982 campaign slogan, - far more so than the country which elected them. Tomorrow's poll will be first test how the Spanish people -have judged that change.

Franco hammered into the Spanish people that the danger was on the left. But the legacy

The Socialists are worried about two groups who may abstain next Sunday - the centre voters who helped so significantly to make up the governing majority last time, and the new voters and the unemployed. Those under 25 make up more than six million eligible voters, and the under-25s also account for half of Spain's three million unemployed - the worst figure m any West European nation. · Senor Gonzalez has built up a remarkable concentration of power, due to his own capacity for hard work, charismatic leadership, and the absence of any opponent of equivalent stature. The Gonzalez team has shown firmness, imagination and much astuteness. At elections, and at the March NATO referendum, it has relied heavily on American techniques of electronic imagemaking. The leader's rallies are primarily "for" the television news bulletins, a state monopoly in Spain. Gonzalez has also concentrated around him a staff of abont 500, with a kernel of 60 personal assisprime minister and deputy party secretary general. This southern slant is important for the bulk of the party's votes have till now come from the less developed south, plus the two Castiles.

The NATO controversy, with the Socialists switching from their '82 election promise to hold a referendum to take Spain out of the alliance to actively campaigning for staying in, proved the party's highly centralized character today.Under the Socialists, Spain has not developed vigorous institutions between the country's leaders and the ordinary citizens. Parliament has not become a more lively place under them, but less so. No Socialist MPs have emerged as 'characters" for the media nor become known as experts. The Changing tack on unemployment Fair game for US

From the Director of the Employment Institute

Sir. The real message of last week's report (The Times, June 13) by Sir Austin Bide's Occupations Study Group on future employment trends was not the gloomy one your leader (June 14) concentrated upon. Nor was it the need for lower pay increases. The main lesson was the case it revealed for urgent Government action on unemployment. The OSG report confirmed that current trends in employment are likely to continue if policy is not changed. There will be further job losses in manufacturing and other

As your leader conceded, wage levels were not a crucial concern; nor the level of capacity. Why, then, do you continue to rule out the case for a "demandboost cure for unemployment?" Your own figures demonstrate

Ordination of women

From the Bishop of Chichester Sir, The suggestion is made by your episcopal correspondents on June 16 that the ordination of women to the presbyterate and episcopate is a second-order matter, which can properly be decided by the General Synod of the Church of England. They overlook the fact that the theological ques-tions raised concern such firstorder matters as the significance of the incarnation of Christ as a man and God's choice of the time and cultural setting of the Incarnation, to mention only two very briefly. The ordination of women would, therefore, make a change in the ministry which would be of an order quite different, for example, from the abolition of the rule of celibacy hy the Church of England at the Reformation, Many believe that the theological question thus raised can only be conclusively settled by ecumenical agreement and that it is not within the competence of particular churches to take action until such an agreement is evident. Yours faithfully. † ERIC CICESTR:

clearly that restrictive policies have not succeeded in bringing down the rate at which wages are rising. But they have persuaded employers that demand and hence employment opportunities will remain depressed.

You write encouragingly that the Government should focus its policies across the board more sharply towards jobs. It can do this in part by redistributing expen-diture towards areas where the money will be spent directly on employment (and particularly by taking on the long-term unemployed, whose re-entry to the labour market will diminish rather than increase pressure on wages). But the Government also needs to loosen its hudgetary shackles and demonstrate that it is in favour of faster growth and genuine expansion.

This means more than taking pride in the million jobs that may have been created since the trough of the depression. The Bide report shows that much more ambitious targets are needed in future if employers are to have the confidence to plan and invest for large increases in their labour force. The two halves of the sentence are inseparable, the second half providing the theological content for the first, which acknowledges and upholds belief that Christ's tomh was empty "as expressing the faith of the Church of England." In the section of the report on Faith and History the point is made that all statements of belief contain many layers of interpretation and that it is impossible to separate out the bare facts on one side, and the meaning which the Church has given to the stories and statements in which those beliefs are expressed on the other. By separating what the bishops have so carefully put together. Professor Ward is able to make a good debating point, while missing the heart of what they were saying.

The essence of belief in revelation is acknowledgement that God's activity can be discerned in history and conveyed in authoritative stories. A church which is fainhful to tradition tells these stories as a form of testimony within which event and interpretation are inextricably mixed. Faith responds to this testimony as its means of access to God and need not for the most part be concerned about unscrambling the mixture. academic raiders From Professor James Manor

Sir. Recently. I attended a lunch at which senior admioistrators from two American universities traded stories of visits to Britain as leaders of what they called "raiding parties" to "poach" dons from British universities. Both were elated at their success and at the way that brilliant scholars had been rendered "easy pickings" by demoralization and the sharp drop in the real value of university drop in the real value of university pay in the UK since 1979. One of the two had just "bagged" two scientists and a medic. The other said that "plundering" British science was old hat to him. He had now moved on to the arts and social sciences and had just recruited four "dazzling" scholars in lit-erature, history, economics and philosophy. These two men came not from elite miversities but from schools of middling quality that are strugging to raise their status, yet they had seduced some of Britain's best minds from centres of prestige and excellence. Their glee may offend those of us who care about British higher education, but the blame-for this lies less with them than with a government in the UK that has laid its universities open to this sort of assault.

It will grow much more serious in the next few years when a wave of retirements creates a huge number of vacant senior posts in America. The British Government must increase its support of the universities as a matter of urgent national interest. Sincerely. JAMES MANOR.

Lest we forget

June 11.

From Mr D. J. Lewis Sir, Following the Austrian presidential election your correspondent (feature, June 14) seeks to persuade us that after, say, 20 years past acts should be forgiven and forgotten. Why not 15 years? Why not 10 years?To seek to equate such matters with time limits is surely a contradiction in terms.

Genocide is a crime so heinous that it transcends the normal perception of right and wrong, crime and punishment. It is a mark of civilised society that those who commit a crime and who are pupished are absolved from that crime when due punishment has been accepted. Can one really say that those who were directly or indirectly involved io the Nazi terror have accepted such punishment?

. In a world of double standards it "found destroyer disappeared". Then, fo is tempting indeed to wipe the slate clean wherever possible so as to avoid confrontation with basic moral issues. Is it yet right to forget Cambodia? Biafra? Should we now consider the events of Soweto in 1976 to be far enough distant to merit a mere footnote in the history book?The answer surely is no. It is our duty to remember, in an effort, however much it may be in vain, to stop the baser instincts of mankind enjoying their periodic triumphs.

No fighting force ever found a more eloquent PRO than the submarine branch of the "Silent Service". In three lengthy articles on June 21, 23 and 28 Rudyard Kipling (1865-1936) paid tribute to it in his inimitable style. It was not known how the name of "The Trade" came to be applied to the Submarine Service, "Some say", wrote Kipling, "that the cruisers invented it because they pretend that submarine officers look like unwashed chauffeurs."

TALES OF "THE TRADE"

SOME WORK IN THE BALTIC

By Rodyard Kipling ...Some time ago HM Submarine E.9 (Commander Max Horton) was in the Baltic, in the deeps of winter, where she used to be taken to her hunting grounds by an icereaker Here - it is not stated in the book, but the Trade knows every aching, single detail of what is left out — she spent a certain time in testing arrangements and appara-tus, which may or may not work properly, immersed in a mixture of lock ice and dirty ice-cream in a temperature well towards zero. This is a pleasant job, made the more delightful by the knowledge that if you slip off the superstruc-ture the deadly Baltic chill will stop your heart long before even your heavy clothes can drown you. Hence (and this is not in the book either) the remark of the highlytrained sailorman in these lati-tudes who, on being told by his superior officer in the execution of his duty to go to Heil, did insubordinately and environsly re-ply- "D'you think I'd be here if I could?". Whereby he caused the entire personnel, beginning with the Commander to say "Amen". Next day she reports: -- "As circumstances were favourable decided to attempt to bag a destroyer." Her "certain position" must have been near a well-used destroyer-run, for shortly afterwards she sees three of them but too far off to attack and, later, as the light is falling a fourth destroy-er towards which she manoeuvres. "Depth keeping" she notes. "very difficult owing to heavy swell." An observation balloon on a gusty day s almost as stable as a submarine "pumping" in a heavy swell, and since the Baltic is shallow, the submarine runs the chance of being let down with a whack on the bottom. None the less, E.9 works her way to within 600 yards of the quarry; fires and waits just long enough to be sure that her torpedo is running straight and that the destroyer is holding her course. Then she dips to avoid detection The rest is deadly simple: - "At the correct moment after firing 45 to 50 seconds, heard the unmistakable noise of torpedo detonating." and a second second

. . There is word from NASA; well there usually is. The two previously undiscovered as-teroids which were recently found to be going round the earth at much the same distance from it as the moon are said to be rich in nickel.

So far, so good; but the discovery has given NASA an idea. The idea is to send mining expeditions to them, to obtain supplies of this rare but essential metal for the orbiting space stations which, we are assured, will be filling the heavens by the end of the century, if only they have enough nickel.

Plain folk may say that the problem of the nickel-shortage for space stations can be easily solved by abandoning the plans for space stations. But that is why they are just plain folk instead of NASA officials. If there is space, there must must there not? - be stations in it. And if those stations need nickel, nickel they shall have. though we have to trawl the skies for it. But there may be other problems involved, which even NASA has failed to spot, and one or two of them could well be more intractable than a shortage of nickel.

" Mining needs miners; everybody knows that Miners have another kind involved, too. unions; everybody knows that.

We are not of the school of thought which believes that little green men with webbed feet and antennae sticking out of their ears have recently landed at Borrowdale; on the other hand, we are not so foolish as to deny all possibility of a world elsewhere. A suff drink may be needed to face what follows: how would the NASA officials feel if they arrived on the nickel-rich moonlet and found a replica of Mr Scargill but with fourteen legs and one huge eye in the middle of his forchead, shouting (from half a dozen mouths) about defending miners' communities? There is no need to be partisan; the visitors are just as likely to meet Sir Ian Macgregor with his head in a plastic bag, or even with a plastic bag in his head. Either way, they are in for a nasty shock. And who knows whether there are enough rugged individualists in space to form a Union of Democratic Miners? And even if there are. would we feel quite as warmly disposed to them if they came in the form of giant beetles or massive quivering blobs of pink jelly?

And there are problems of -Who says the nickel found in space is exactly the same substance as the kind found on earth? Suppose it had a very slight, an imperceptible, different atomic constitution; imagine the dismay on the space stations when the nickel began to buckle, or give off disconcerting purple sparks.

Nor is that the end of it. What about cost-effectiveness? Talk about uneconomic pits; does the Treasury realise that every four-penn'orth of nickelmined in space will cost a sum, in pounds, so huge that it will be quicker to weigh the noughts than count them? And then, the end of the century is still some way off; surely the scientists will have come up with a cheap substitute for nickel before it dawns, or even a means of turning cardboard milk-cartons into the precious substance at the pressing of a button_

The plain folk may be right, after all. We would not advocate the abandonment of the entire space programme; we recognise that there must be progress, even if we are sometimes not sure why. But before the mining expedition sets off. it might do well to sit down and think the project through rather more fully. Brother. can you spare a nickel?

They'd told me to expect all that old-English courtesy and restraint, but what happened often enough was that fist-fights would break out between the people who had come to hear me and the ones who wanted to carry on talking at the bar. Luckily my team usually won through in the end."

Miss Cook has never made a movie, seldom works on television (though she was seen there recently with a definitive rendering of "Losing My Mind" in the concert version ndheim's Follics) and has not worked in a Broadway show for more than 15 years. Indeed the vagaries of her remarkable career have given her a memorably ironic cabaret number called "The Ingenue": "The parts you play quite often may require you to ham a

A legend in his own goalmouth

England's chances of beating Argentina in tomorrow's World Cup quarter-final rest heavily on the shoulders of their remarkable goalkeeper. David Miller reveals what makes Peter Shilton more than equal to the task ony Maylon and Drummond Challis director and producer of the Interna-tional Football Federation's official feature film of the World Cup in Spain, G'Ole - and now in Mexico - have been obliged to realign their cameras. They were creating the film exclu-sively around the play-makers and goal scorers: Platini, Maradona, Elkjaer, Butragueno, Lineker. But, when troubled England unpre-dictably trounced Poland, Maylon and Challis suddenly had to include, in their closeup scrutiny of the stars of 1986, a goalkeeper.

Radio

Peter Shilton of England established himself, on the pitch at Monterrey and on Wednesday at the Azteca Stadium in Mexico City, as a goalkeeper unique in the current competition and arguably the most accomplished in the World Cup's 56-year history. He is to any opposing team what Moscow was to Napoleon and Hitler.

As England prepare to meet, in tomorrow's quarter-final, the challenge of Maradona, an Argentinian with extraordinary acceleration and lethal scoring power, Shilton is the player who, more than any, permits them to face the task with equanimity. "He is a legend in his own time". England's manager Bobby Robson says. Shilton is con-sidered by many to be superior even to Gordon Banks,

In his opinion Shilton, 36 must be considered ahead of the illustrious keepers of the past: more agile than Yashin of Russia; more authoritative than Banks; possessing more character than Zoff of Italy; more consistent than Maier of West Germany. "I think only Gylmar, Brazil's goalkeeper when they won in 1958 and 1962, was Shilton's equal. because of his exceptional intelligence". Sexton says. And we cannot finally judge Shilton until England have won something."

Sixteen years ago England's manager. Sir Alf Ramsey, sent six surplus players home before the Mexico finals. One was Shilton. The three goalkeepers Ramsey retained were Banks, Bonetti - who was to throw away the quarter-final when Banks was taken ill – and Stepney. "It was the right decision to leave me out", Shilton says, "and I benefited Banks did not take charge of the whole penalty area to the same extent that Shilton does". Dave Sexton, in Mexico to study England's opponents and to advise Robson, says. There are special deals for younger travellers this summer. Local authorities in Denmark are offering free accommodation to young people between 14 and 26 from June 22 - July 6. The only requirement is that they should bring their own sleeping bag, and they can stay up to three nights m each place. The accommodation is in private homes and farms, schools and youth hostels, and informatinn is available at local tourist offices and railway stations. Eurotrain is holding its 1985 prices till the end of June with reductions of up to 50 per cent off normal fares to young people under 26. Information: 01-730 3402.

Otympic Hnlidays has a programme of island-hopping holidays in Greece. Accom-modation is in "basic" village rooms and prices start at £165. Freestyle Holidays still has plenty of availability on the slands of Corfu, Rhodes and Zakynthos, with prices from £195 for one week.

An enusual 25-day tour to China is being operated by Serenissima Travel in August. The tour, priced at £3,650, will journey into parts of China which are still rarely visited by Western travellers, including Koko Nor, the country's larg-est lake. Information: 01-730 9841.

Sunny season

Tough competition between oirlines on the London-Miami route has produced more price cuts on inclusive holidays to Florida. Richard Branson's Virgin Holidays is offering holidays at low-season rates for the rest of June and throughout July, with the price of a typical two-week holiday in Sunny Isles, Miami, coming down by £200 to £349.

City lights

Budget-price breaks to six cities in Spain and Morocco are being operated until the end of July by Enterprise Holidays, with prices starting at £99 for two nights' bed and breakfast in Madrid, Barcelona and Bilbao or for three nights in Tangier. Breaks are also available in Valencia and Casablanca and all flights are on BA scheduled services.

IN THE GARDEN

Hatching an unruly plot

Francesca Greenoak weeds out

the problems with wild gardens

This week I am going to mow my meadow. I am going to mow it out of existence and return this little patch of tall grasses. dog daisy, primroses nnd buttercups to parity with the rest of the lawn. It will be a sad wrench hut I made a mistake in encouraging a semi-wild meadow area grow-ing up to espalier apples which are an intrisically artificial form, and call for mown grass around them. It is all 100 easy to go wrong with making a wild garden.

I have always found wild plants irresistible. In my first gardens. I would have nothing but wild things. I loved those unruly plots dearly, but came to realize that some plants, such as the scramhling yellow herb bennet or sprawling bladder campion, though charm-ing in their wild habitats will never really look good in a small garden.

The best route to success with wild flowers is to look carefully at plants in the wild and to plan according to what you see, relating your garden to various natural habitats. You don't need a great deal of space; I once had a successful mini-meadow with meadow saxifrage and snakeshead fritillaries which was only the size of a single bed.

Garden meadows look best backed up to a hedge or a wall. In them you can grow a succession of flowers from snowdrops, wild daffodils (which look infinitely better in grass than the garden cultivars) dainty silver-pink lady's smocks, cowslips, huttercups

Rich pickings

A certain amount of hinning of fruit and vegetables is necessary around mid-summer. It seems a shame to waste the thinnings - they can be treated as a very early crop. Vegetables that are usually eaten cooked such as and clover. This takes you into early July, when I would recommend mowing a small garden meadow. If you have lots of space you could entertain the larger summer plants such as the purple vetches, the pretty yellow meadow vetchling, meadow cranesbill (make sure it's the wild kind which is a glorous deep sky blue, not a garden variety) and even knapweed. A shaded area under a hedge or beneath trees serves as a woodland-edge habitat. It can be planted with bluebell, and the beautiful wood anemone with its white petals tinged pink, a fern perhaps, periwin-kle and the delightful lowgrowing moschatel known as town-hall clock because of its queerly hox shaped flowerheads. Semi-woodland plants also look well by shady walls. This year. I have a colourful show of red campion brightening up a previously dreary north wall which it shares with bluebell, hedge garlic and fragrant dame's Other habitats which deserve serious consideration are a marshy area and a pond. Here the yellows of marsh marigold and wild flag and the splendid spires of purple loosestrife will give you a offering seed nowadays, some of it a little dubious. If you are succession of colour and inter-est. A dry stony habitat, like a make sure it is native, not rockery, may not suit every garden, but a wall, planted imported. Like any other garden, they need care and attention. Meadow areas in particular require mowing or they will become rank, and clumpy grasses will take over. Mowing in late June or early July is good for meadows which feature spring flowers, others can be mowed in August. Always remove the mowings. Perhaps this is because when the British think of the Loire they do not think of the massive mariolatrous statuary of Le Puy, where every hilltop bears a hundred-foot statue of the Virgin. Nor do they think of the soccer town of St Etienne; and gastro-pilgrims to the multi-starred Troisgros restaurant at Roanne hardly bother to consider that the dismal otherwise undistingnished town bestrides France's greatest river. No, the Loire, to the British, means Touraine, the bit where the Loire as just the east-west leg of the river is upheld at Cafe Enut Loire, whose regional dishes are of the sort that are supposed to belong to towns ALC: NET like Tours, Angers and Saumur.

I say supposed because, as countless thwarted travellers will have learned, "regional" cooking - that which depends 25.2 on the produce and, more E ST pertinently, the custom of a Muscadet, which presumably particular area - is now just might be made with any wine, about extinct, kept going only by the self conscious efforts of up-market nouvelle cuisiniers, the same cuisiniers whose "novelty cooking" during the last decade and a half more or less did for it. It is now habitual throughout France for laureled chefs to offer a menu of plats regionaux, pre-pared with an archaeological correctness. The fashion for repro cookery has now, apparently, spread to England. Though Cafe Loire can hardly be accused of the archaeological tendency, its effort at noisettes Atkinson's pronunciation of the former St Etienne inside-forward's name as Rosh-Ece-Toe. According to both Elizabeth David and Jane Grigson it should be prepared thus: the pork is sealed, then it's simmered in some of the Vourery that half a kile of

Cafe Loire's version comprises three chunks of chargrilled pork with an iodependently contrived sauce which while it may be composed of the "correct" ingredients does not make its liaison with the meat at the right moment. Yon've got to time your run. Other dishes on this part of the menu include: rillons de porc which in my unhappy aumurois experience are de-offer the traditional dishes of their native area - dishes, incidentally, that are now only rarely to be found in Bordeaux itself. The cooking in that city's many excellent estab-lishments is only notionally based on the old repertoire.

Here in Old Brompton Road you'll find another prune and meat combination (the region is the largest producer of prunes in France); and cassoulet - Aquitaine does stretch down to the cassoulet belt, which is also, by no coincidence, the rugby belt. It's a well-known fact that future French prop forwards are drip fed this dish from birth. There are oysters with skinless sausages (though not, evidently, this month) and jambon de Bayonne. You'll also find some of those lapses of decorative taste that are apparently de rigueur in decent joints throughout France: a luridly impasto painting, chunks of harness on the roughcast walls, horrible gewgaws in niches. There is, furthermore, a pianist who specializes in the more maudlin compositions of Jean Lennon and Elton Jean: still most of the punters bray so volubly that little of his work at the ivories is audible. There are occasional special nights here devoted to the art of chanson, French exiles line up to pay warbling hommage to Piaf, Brel and Brassens.

There is a lot for the punters to bray about. The cooking is first rate, the service is charming, the wines are not greedily priced (though the selection is thinnish), and at the end of the meal you are offered complimentary glasses of "white cognac", chocolates and ciga-rettes. Before that you'll have enjoyed a copious spread of fullish if too young Madiran foie gras, warm "salad" of skate with beurre hlanc, confit of duck with a flageolet pure that is a high-born relation of dahl and pease pudding, chicken breast with a potent sauce of cream and (dried) cepes, oversweet nougatine saved by a tart apricot sauce, oversweet creme brulée that is unsaveable. The bread is good and so are the vegetables, especially a sauté of celery and Closed Sun. peppers. With a glass of Pineau de Charentes, another of Floc de Gascogne and a

Yet I do not belong to that stern school of thought which claims that great vintages must taste revolting in their youth to attain a glorious maturity later on. Certainly an excess of youthful tannin, acidity and fruit can occasionally provide an astringent mouthful. But if the quality is

Bearing all that in mind, it was therefore with some bewilderment that I tasted, blind, the 1979 champagne vintage, which has already been rated a great champagne year by experts. Instead of elegance, harmony and balance, which should be the hallmark of these seven-yearold champagnes, the group of eight leading grandes marques houses were, with a few exceptions, very disappointing. has had anything but praise for the '79s. Everyone seems to be convinced that it is a firstclass champagne vintage that just needs time to reveal its true glory and soften up its austere edges. This may be true, but as most champagne vintages are at their best at around ten years old, the '79s

should by now be showing some indication of future pleasure in my opinion few As usual the 1979 weather pattern in Champagne has had much to do with the quality, or lack of it, of the vintage. Last-minute rain and, to a lesser extent, a cold, late start.

probably caused the problems. No one could grumble about the quantity of wines produced - some 228,581,961 bottles - the biggest vintage by far of the '70s and, to date. the third largest champagne vintage on record. Cynical it may be but I cannot help thinking that it is this factor that settled the reputation of this vintage. 4 Overall the '79s are certain-

If you want to find a boom area in this depressed country of ours, look no further than museums. New ones are opening at the rate of one a week and though not all survive, it is a remarkable story.

Behind it lies a comhination of public thirst for knowledge and efforts by advertising and marketing men to dispel the image of dusty, fusty halls. Suddenly, moseums are fun. In A Future For the Past? (Radio 4, Thurs, 7.40-9pm), Robert Hewison takes a criti-cel look at the museum becam cal look at the museum bonan-za, before introducing a phone-in with Sir Roy Strong, director of the Victoria and Albert, and Professor Brian Morris, the volnhle Welshman who heads the Museums and Galleries Commission.

Connoissents of Restoration comedy, with its astringent wit and impossibly involved plots, will relish the new production will relish the new production of George Etherege's satire, The Man of Mode (Radio 3, Fri, 7.45-9.35pm). Derek Jacobi plays the hero. Dorimant, who lives off the fashlomable ladies of the day, and the plum part of the dandy, Sir Fopling Flutter, goes to John Webb.

Another play with a period flavour is John Clifford's Losing Venice (Radio 3, Tues, 7.30-9pm), a success of last year's Edinburgh Festival fringe. David Rintoel is the newly-wed Dake who finds himself saddled with o frigid wife and decides that waging war is a more rewarding exercise than making love.

In Special Subject (Radio 4, Tues, 3-4pm), Melville Jones has fashioned one of those ocatly plotted domestic dramas that are so often the stuff of the Afternoon Play.

In Moonlighting he expressed these ideas through Richard Williams a group of Polish building workers doing up a house in London while awaiting news of the Solidarity crisis back home.

Success Is the Best Revenge takes the process a stage further by exploring the expe-rience of exile through different generations and at the same time bringing the argu-ment much closer to Skolimowski's own position. Indeed apart from the casting of Michael York, Success Is the Best Revenge is very cearly a family affair.

Yet another dropped brick from the Victoria and Albert Museum. This time it has let slip the opportunity to stage a unique and lucrative exhibi-tion on the 250th anniversary of Stradivarius's death.

Between 30 and 40 of the 600 Stradivari still extant had been pledged after London dealer and connoisseur Charles Beare trawled the market of willing owners. Musicians including Sir Yehu-di Menuhin and Yo Yo Ma had indicated their willingness to take part in associated concerts, yet the V & A finally turned the project down. Our loss will be the Italians' gain: much of Beare's three-year spadework will now be incorporated into a similar festival at Cremona, the bome of Stradivarius. The V & A has missed an opportunity to stage something which would have given it great international kudos", says Beare. "I was angry, but after what's been happening there recently it's matching there recently it's probably safer not to have such valuable instruments under its roof anyway."

Religion embracing reason

Is it reasonable to be religious or is religious commitment an essentially irrational affair? The fashionable tendency to applaud religion as irrational, a matter of "faith" not reason has been explicitly supported by contributors to these columns.

It has been maintained that rational argument has no place in religious discourse; that religion is in a sphere beyond reason and is concerned with those mysteries beyond man's comprehension. The contrast is frequently made with science which, it is said, is associated with the iotellect and in which we can have certainty, experimental verification and demonstrative proof.

The function of religion. it is claimed, is to add a spiritual dimension to life which science cannot do, and that of science is to develop a rational system of knowledge which religion cannot do.

Further, it has been maintained, science and rationality are associated with the male characteristics of drive and assertiveness, science is active and exploratory, whereas religion is associated with the femioine characteristics of intuition, passivity and receptivity, with all that is poetic and imaginative. Rationality, it is said, pours cold water on our passions and stifles the voice of the heart.

This assertion that religion is somehow beyond reason and rational argument is dangerous nonsense. It is nonsense because it involves a confused and often contradictory account of reason and rationality and it is dangerous because religion without reason leads as often as not to intolerance and ultimately to violence.

On a wider front, the fasionable cult of irrationalism. closely linked to notions of relativism, is one of the disturbing features in society today, not least because it suggests that there can be no rational discussion of beliefs with respect of objective truth or falisty.

The argument for an all-embracing irrationalism (all truth is relative) is selfdefeating. The assertion that there is no truth cannot be a true assertion. It is significant that those intellectuals who are intent on debunking the rationalist tradition resort to a method of argument and presentation which is deeply entrenched in the very tradition they disdain.

Those who emphasize the inexplicable nature of their deep religious experiences can only resort to rational methods of presenting their case. Once you start arguing you are in the rationalist tradition and only within that tradition is there bope for a world that would otherwise be bent on destroying uself.

It is clear from what has already been said that rationalism is identified with criticism and argument. Sir Karl Popper has been the most tireless and outstanding advocate of this approach.

His characterization of rationalism as an attitude of readiness to listen to critical arguments and to learn from experience is fruitful in all areas of human endeavour, not least in politics, science and religion.

Rationality consists not in justifica-tion but in making mistakes and in the elimination of error. When politicians prohibit rational criticism and argument they ultimately resort to policies of mutual destruction; when scientists attempt only to justify their conjectures and findings they prohibit further discoveries and growth of knowledge: and when religious people attempt to protect themselves from criticism by retreating into a realm beyond reason they promote the worst kind of bigotry. intolerance and fanaticism which enslaves rather than frees and ultimately leads to violence and bloodshed. We need not look beyond our own times for horrendous examples of religious fanaticism which by putting itself beyond criticism leads man to murder his brother in the name of the living God.

The identification of rationality with critical argument is at one and the same time a costly and a liberating admission, It cuts the ground away from under the feet of those who desire to justify their endeavours by claiming proof and certainty.

Such claims made in the name of science can never be realised. All our scientifie knowledge is conjectural, tentative, provisional. Only by exposing our most cherished theories to severe criticism do we advance our scientifie knowledge. Scientifie knowledge is fallible and the recognition of its fallibility is its strength, for only he who admits the possibility of error will learn by his mistakes and bopefully edge nearer 10 the truth.

Would that politicians learn this lesson for only by taking the risk of losing face will they begin to solve the problems of society and gain public confidence. Religious people above all should avoid claims to infallible truth. Put in a nutshell the argument is as humour. stercoraceous even by French standards. Coluche follows: if rationality is identified with achieved immense popularity proof and justification then religioo is in France in a lifetime spent irrational, but by the same token so is lambasting the establishment. science. But if we characterize rationali-And he was never better loved ty as the altempt to expose falsehood and error by criticism, then both science by the common man, than in his widely publicized entry and religion are rational. into the French Presidential campaign of 1981.

The disclosure of religious or scientific insight might defy rational analysis, but such insights, once articulated, must be subjected to critical appraisal.

It is a false dichotomy to separate man's spiritual quest from his intellectual endeavours: they are intertwined. We have been blessed with brains. without them we could know nothing of this marvellous, mysterious, puzzling and at times infuriating world: nor could we begin to apprehend the creative love of God which is at the heart of it all.

blasphemous. coprological. and sexually explicit vocabu-Ever since St Paul eulopised the virtue of Christian love in his letter to the lary, into a personal art form. Corinthians it has been considered virtually blasphemous to question love was essentially picaresque and anarchic. There was a good deal of the Svejk in him. as the greatest human virtue.

But this cannot be so, for love as an unregulated passion is an irrational and potentially dangerous force in our lives. Love unregulated by reason cao lead, as we have indicated, to an appeal to brute force and violence as the ultimate arbiter in buman affairs.

If it be countered that love which leads to violence is not true love, our contention is proven, for only reason can be used to help us judge between true and false love. Love must never be put beyond the critical rational assessment of its consequences.

Man is a rational animal, with a head on his shoulders. He is also a child of God with love in his heart. Let us not put asunder what God has joined together.

The Bureau's ambitions extend even to controlling journalists' use of language. "Draconian" and "riot-torn" as descriptions respectively of the emergency measures and the general state of country have been ruled to be objectionable.

Journalists have also been warned that they use the phrase "white-minority government" at their peril. (In a strict sense, Pretoria has a point here as the cabinet now contains one Cape Coloured and ooe Indian minister, though neither has a portfolio).

Further additions to the glossary of forbidden terms are awaited.

New trust

Seven crucial days for Lord Barber

> the Monopolies Commission yesterday hardly came as a surprise: Standard Chartered sbares edged up just 2p to 809p. Whatever the merits of the offer, it would not have detained the Office of Fair Trading for long had banks not been involved and there is certainly no case for drawing a ring fence round the City.

> The formal non-reference does, however, clear the way for the crucial week in this unexpectedly tough bid battle. Standard Chartered has left it to the last moment allowed uoder the takeover code to issue its main defence document over the weekend, leaving Lloyds as little time as possible to ponder a possible higher offer, which it must do by next weekend. The running out of the initial bid extension oo Tuesday is the obvious moment for action.

Standard Chartered's chairman, Lord Barber, returned from eminent person duties, will oot be able to make a profit forecast for the full year but will indicate an improvement of 15 per cent or more in trading profits for the first four months. More to the point, perhaps, he will forecast a sharp improvement on last year's 30.5p dividend, perhaps by as much as 20

Whether that of itself demands a less rosy view of the convertible involved, it is about 250p.

Uodoubtedly, the Standard Char-tered share price has been buoyed up by some friendly buying, most likely from the Far East. The group's managing director, Micbael McWilliam, acknowledges that he has received expressions of support from "a number of parties" but stresses that no deals have been done.

There is little doubt that Lloyds can add Standard Chartered's business so much more attractive than it was only a few years ago - to its global ambitions if it is prepared to pay enough. The question which Lord Barber and his colleagues must be asking is whether Lloyds is anxious enough to

The decision not to refer the Lloyds £35.6 million of last year's £268 Bank bid for Standard Chartered to million pretax profit, considerably million pretax profit, considerably less than tropical Africa. It may be harder to maintain good relations in other African countries if the politics become fraught but at least the group is nothing like as vulnerable as it traditionally might have been.

SE moves in

The Stock Exchange initiative to absorb over-the-counter share trading seems to be working. A dozen licensed dealers have recently submit-ted applications for Stock Exchange membership. About half these applications are a direct result of the Exchange's plans to set up a third market tier beneath the Unlisted Securities Market which would encompass more basic overthe-couoter shares. The Exchange's move stemmed from the Financial Services Bill, which demands that OTC securities dealing be conducted through a Recognised Investment Exchange (RIE). Any RIE must have proper reporting and its members must have adequate capital resources and internal procedures to protect customers. OTC dealers themselves were unable to organize this - not least because of the costs and jealousies among themselves. The Exchange's move to capture the OTC will itself not be without difficulties.

In a sense, the Exchange is cleverly using the time gap between big bang and the date that self-regulation becomes operational to build a strong position from the start. It is effectively attempting to limit access to the market to Stock Exchaoge members by stipulating that third market companies will require sponsorship by a member of the Exchange.

As a temporary measure this is justified. The third market is due to become operational on big bang day -October 27 - and the Securities and Investments Board will not be ready to receive its powers under the Finaocial Services Bill until early next

The SIB has already said that an RIE cannot limit its membership to persons authorized by a particular SRO .The Stock Exchange, therefore, will have eventually to allow a member of any SRO access to the third market.

There is also still a problem over liquidity in this third market. At present, it is difficult to deal in size on

Oil output rose, in fact, by 5 per cent in the first quarter. Without this and the recovery from the coal strike, the output measure of GDP would have dropped by 0.1 per cent. The effects of lower oil prices casme through more dramatically in company profits. Profits of private sector companies totalled £11.65 billion in the first quarter, 18 per cent down on a year earlier. Detailed figures will be published next week, but it ap-pears that most of the drop was in North Sea profits.

Public corporations, in contrast, appear to be performing profit miracles. In the first quarter, profits, at £2.1 billion, were 83 per cent up on a year earlier. The comparisoo is misleading, however, reflecting the lower losses for the National Coal Board, now British Coal, after the cod of the miners' strike.

So far Lloyds has shown a greater reluctance to knock Standard Chartered than vice versa - understandably, since that would reflect on its own wisdom. In the present political environment, however, nervousness in the iotended victim's camp is bound to centre on its South African operations. The parent company stake in Standard Bank of South Africa has been diluted to 39 per cent and southern Africa produced just the OTC at advertised prices. Merely introducing these companies to a wider range of market-makers will not automatically increase dealings.

Existing market-makers, while welcoming the third market, say that they will want to see a good sponsor-ing broker behind the third market company before they will make a market in it. It remains to be seen whether third market companies will hold out sufficient reward to attract sponsors of high standard.

stockbrokers Laurence Prust, argued strongly on AE's behalf that the terms were too 'how.

His judgement proved to be right and the company has recovered strongly since GKN's bid. Its value has risen risen sharply, with yesterday's part cash bid from Tunner & Newall valuing it at £194 million. But even this is probably not enough to win over shareholders, who again can look to Mr Evershed, now at Laurence Keen, a fund management group, to argue their case. He speaks for more than 7 per cent of the shares in AE. News of the bid sent AE's shares racing from 182p to 230p, well above the 196p value of the offer. Analysts expect its conservatively stated profits to rise from £22.6 million to £25 million in the year to September, which means the offer values AE on a prospective earnings multike of only 12. to 1986 have grown at a Mr Evershed, says AE's compound 75.1 per cent ple of only 12.

conservative accounting understates the real value of the company. What AE might report as £25 million, another company could call £39 million. In that case the offer is on a multiple of merely eight. While Mr Evershed may be indulging in a little wishful thinking, his figures suggest that there is sufficient worth in AE to attract other bidders. Its technology is t well known, not just in the motor component field. And even AE admits that a bigger force is better suited to today's international ... markets. - It does, however, imply that size is not everything. Turner & Newall's rivals

Rotaflex/Emess

Emess Lighting's £54 mil-hon final offer for Rotaflex, which was clearly intended as a knock-out blow, had some of its thunder stolen yesterday as the market seethed with reports of a white knight about to enter the fray. Buying in the market by W Greenwell, the stockbroker, caused speculation that MK Electric Group was the white knight. Rotaflex shares rose 62p to a high at 450p. The four-for-three share offer from Emess values each Rotaflex share at 448p, on Emess shares 7p higher at 336p. The cash offer has been raised to 400p. The share deal puts Rotaflex on a generous his-toric p/e ratio of 24.2 and a prospective one of 15.9. Rotaflex, however, does not seem to be impressed.

Rotaflex objects to its prospective rating being lower than Emess's, when it says its earnings per share from 1981 against 22:8 per cent at Emess. Emess enjoys a histor-ic rating of 23.7 and a prospective of 18.7, based on vesterday's forecast of taxable profits this year of at least £4.3 million against £3.38 million last year.

Rotaflex has put up a vigorous defence, including a forecast of a rise of nearly 50 per cent in taxable profits this year. However, its ability to see off Emess must now be in doubt unless it gets a little help from its friends. Its shares were only standing at 210p before the Emess bid. A white knight would have to offer terms at least as good as Emess's, unless it could present more compelling synergy arguments. Emess has

The City expects AE, former- are among the long list of argued the commercial logic of its bid is undeniable. Rotaflex disagree MK Electric, if indeed it emerges next week as the white knight, could have a problem offering terms as full as Emess's. Its p/e ratio on 1984-85 profits is 12.6. Prof-its for 1985-86 are due out next week, but are not expect-ed to be over-inspiring after the drop in interim profits. Emess, however, will not suffer any dilution from its increased bid. Shareholders should still sit tight and await developments.

Renold

Has the Renold engineering group, best known for its chains, run out of steam after. its splendid recovery from the brink of disaster four years ago? Yesterday's annual results suggest that after all the restructuring, cost-cutting, redundancies and improved efficiencies, there may not be much further to go in the short-to-medium term. Pretax profits of £7.6 million in the year to March, up from £4.5 million, were in line with most expectations, as was the 1.3p final dividend, the first for three years. However, the latest figures include a oneoff £1.3 million credit from an overfunded American pension scheme, as well as a £900,000 reduction in interest charges. Trading profits were up 10 per cent at £10 million, with domestie profits slightly down at £5.5 million. Second half margins on torsover showed a fall after a £300,000 currency loss and a £189,000 profit sharing payment. The news for this year is hardly encouraging, Sir Campbell Adamson, chair-man, expects the weakness in UK domestic manufacturing industry to continue at least for the first half of the year and is already predicting a drop in interim profits. Against the gloom; Renold argues that it has a range of new products on the develop ment floor The results caused the shares to drop 9p to 78p yesterday but even at that price it would seem that bid, rather than growth, prospects are the best reason forbuying.

... Next week the company is expected to meet a number of leading City analysts to orge them not to pitch their profit forecasts for this year too high. Yesterday, it met several brokers - including Williams de Broe - and gave them the same message. Most analysis had been looking for pretax profits of more than £425 million, compared with last year's £355.8 million Brokers such as de Zoete & Bevan had predicted £430 million and one has even pitched its estimate as high as £440 million.

The shares of Marks and Spencer lost an early lead vesterday, to close 1 p lighter at 201p and dealers now fear that the price will dip below 200p next week as it tries to get its message across before the annual meeting on July 3.

"A feeble sop to consumerism" is how one solicitor described the Law Society's latest attempt at a scheme to improve the proce-dure for dealing with clients' complaints against their solicitors.

Until this week, your only recourse against a negligent solicitor was to find another solicitor and barrister and bring an often expensive and uming court action.

But this week the Law Society announced an arbitration scheme, describing it as "a simple and inexpensive means of dealing with such of the smaller complaints of neg-ligence by clients against ligence by solicitors".

The winner may also get a refund

Under the scheme, you will not need to go to court. Instead, on payment of a registration fee of £40 plus VAT, by both you and the solicitor against whom you are alleging negligence, an inde-pendent arbitrator will look into the complaint.

He can make an award for damages, and may also direct that if you win the case you get a refund of your registration fee.

Any proposals, to improve the lot of consumers should be encouraged. But this new scheme certainly does seen to leave a lot to be desired.

It is also somewhat debat-able about how "inexpensive" the scheme is for the consum-cheaper to go to the county court, which has its own arbitration procedure where you have the opportunity to £500, the new scheme with its one-off payment can be more cost-effective, but your case can be presented only in writing. This may obviously be an advantage to those of us who have no desire to be do-ityourself advocates, but it does severely restrict the usefulness of the scheme:

A spokesman for the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators commented: "The scheme is not suitable for conflicts of oral testimony. If a client alleges that a solicitor said something negligent, and the solicitor denies it, then you would still have to go to court to hear their oral evidence."

The National Consum Council also argues that freelance independent arbitrators will not be able to provide a single system of continuity of standards, for deciding when, in fact, a solicitor is negligent. Even the Law Society's enthusiasm for the scheme seemed somewhat muted, The

'It fills a hole The most glaring fault in the

How home can be cash in hand

With house prices going through the roof there are oo prizes for guessing this summer's favourite dinner party topic.

But estimating the value of your house is a peculiarly impotent form of_ greed. A house is an investment, yet it yields up its profit most grudgingly. Your home may be gaining in value, but it is hardly cash in the bank. If you move and plough your gain back into a new house the gain will be hidden. The real beneficiaries tend to be the bilders be the children who inherit.

However, you can unlock some of the equity you have built up by borrowing. It is possible to take out a bigger mongage and release some of the excess value. Finding a willing lender for remorigaging has been a problem in the past but, with today's house prices at record levels and money flooding into the home loan market, borrowers can pick and choose. The building societies, banks and assorted finance houses have been stumbling over themselves to lend their quotas of mortgage money.

The buyer's market in credit may already be on the wane. Just this week the Halifax Building Society has pulled out of the remortgage market on the basis of its latest set of house prices, which show the sort of gains that make one wonder how long it can all last.

Houses gained on average 11 per cent throughout Britaio in the year to May, but in the South-East the rise was 16.1 per cent - further evidence that the gap between north and south is widening. For home owners it means that the amount of equity in their properties will be even greater and the temptation lo take some capital will be that much stronger.

But they should be careful. "House prices are certainly not rock-solid, especially not in the more depressed areas of the country," says John Pegg, of the National Westmioster Bank."There's a school of thought which says values are something of a bubble which is set to burst, eveo io the South-East. That's why we have a margin of safety as to the amounts we are prepared to lend."

There are hundreds that are eager to lend money

National Westminster sets 2 limit of 80 per cent of valuation as the absolute maximum loan on a remortgage. The Abbey National Building Society is equally cautious, requiring a safety margin of at least 25 per cent, while Mcdens Trust, a Brown Shipley subsidiary, will lend no more than half the value of the property.

Let us say you are prepared to take the risk of a fall in prices, and you want to release some of the capital value of your house. How do you do it? What should you expect, if anything, in tax relief? What are the lowest and best rates of interest?

Applying has never been so easy. There are hundreds of lenders, most of them cager. There will certainly be valuation costs to pay. Your new tranche of credit will not necessarily come cheap. A bigger mortgage will provide you with extra capital, but no extra tax relief. Income tax relief is granted on interest on a loan made for home purchase or improvement. That means you can get tax relief on the loan for an extension but not for the designer wallpaper.

Interest on the first £30,000 of loan qualifies. But a smaller mortgage of, say, £10,000, will attract tax relief on that portion only if a remortgage up lo, say, £25,000 is undertaken. In other words, the additional £15,000 will be charged to you in full, without tax relief unless it is for bome improvement.

How much you pay will vary depending on whom you ask and in some cases what you want to do with the money. Some institutions, for example, the Cheltenham & Gloucester Building Society, will charge the same rate as on their ordinary mortgages. The Cheltenham & Gloucester insists that it is "flexible on this type of borrowing, but no more nor less than anyone else".

Others may be as flexible but they want more interest from borrowers. "We will happily lend against a property for a borrower's personal reasons," says John Bayliss, of Abbey National, "but we will charge a premium of up to 3 per cent more than our normal moreage rate." The big clearing banks will all lend money against a house, although they prefer to call it a "personal loan secured against property".

The banks' rates vary, but they should be substantially lower than the 20 per cent or so which is the going rate for unsecured personal loans. An applicant can expect a tough bargaining session with the branch manager, who will look closely at ability to repay and the other mechanics of mortgage application, such as income, multipliers.

One factor which can influence the interest level is the purpose of the loan. Banks tend to favour the Protestant work ethic over the desire, to dissipate. "A loan for a capital-injection into a company would probably have a lower interest rate

> Borrowing for school fees is popular than one used for a yacht purchase." says Mr Pegg. Borrowing for school fees is popular. Claremont Saville will lend up to 70 per cent of valuation, including existing mort-gage, and the funds are provided as and when required. Until then no. interest, at 21/2 per cent over base, is payable. NEL Britannia has a similar, scheme with a £50,000 maximum at the 1 per cent cheaper rate of 111/2 percent,

Under the terms of the Bill the SIB is the only body to which the Secretary of State can, at first, delegate his powers, although he can sub-sequently delegate to other bodies instead of the SIB. The SIB will be both the rulemaker and the policeman for investment husinesses.

At one point it was thought that there would be two sets of rule-makers, the Marketing of Investments Board, which would maioly regulate the way in which investments such as life assurance and unit trusts could be sold to the public, and the SIB, which would take care of everything else. This plan has been dropped. So when you come accross the term MIBOC, this stands for the committee which was formed to set up MIB - the Membership of an SRO will be sufficient for an iovestment business to carry on its husiness.

Not any old body will be recognized by the SIB as an SRO. A recognized SRO has to have rules designed to ensure its members are fit and proper persons, rules on discipline and expulsion of its members, adequate procedures for monitoring members, investigating complaints and enforcing its rules.

It must also demonstrate that it has the resources to do all this, and have a compensation scheme to protect the public should any of its members go into liquidation or run off with clients' money. At the moment the SIB is also active in huying and formulating its own rule book - which will apply to all investment businesses that selliog shares, particularly of the large and internationally known English companies such as ICL so there is an choose to be authorized di-

National Westminster is jumping on the gold card bandwagon. From July 1 NatWest customers earning at least £20,000 will be eligible for the bank's new Gold Plus Sarvice, free for the first year. The main setting point of the popular gold card is the automatic overdraft facility – no more grovelling at the feet of the bank manager. And the new NatWest version offers the customer up to £10,000 with no questions asked. Gold cards these days come with a Gold cards these days come with a battery of useful services.

In the cast of NatWest there is Freefone Brokarline for share dealing, plus free parsonal accident insurance and an investment and tax advisory service. NatWest customers will have to pay £50 a year for their new gold card service on renewal.

Catch them young!

- -127.01

- The banks have been trying to catch their customers young for some time. The theory is that if you catch them young you keep them, if not until dotage, at least until they are long enough in the tooth to decide which bank offers the best value. Students are the prima target. They are bomberded by brochures and all sorts of gimmickry and inducements to persuade them to part with the drant cheque.
- part with the grant cheque.
- The latest comes from the Midland, which actually offers 26 in cash or an alarm clock which retails at 28, cheap
- loans, travel card, foreign currency and Eurocheque discounts. All that, and
- free banking even when they are in the red.

- Lioyds Bank, meanwhile, is going even further down the age range. Savers as young as 13 are now invited to join the queues at the money dispensing machines. Cashpoint cards allowing withdrawals of £100 a day are to be distributed to children who apply. Applicants must have the aigned approval wut, of a parent or guardian.

The offer is restricted to endowment mortgages, which — if you choose the low-cost andowment home loan — still works out cheaper than the usual repayment mortgage at the going 11 reproved rate per cent rate.

For example, the combined Interest and assurance payments on a £30,000 low-cost endowment loan for a 30year-old man work out at 223.23 a month under the Skipton's new fixed rate deal – and £9.60 a month of that pays for redundancy and sickness cover for two years. Repayments plus the premiums on a montgage protection policy for the same size standard poincy for the same size standard repayment mortgage are £235.01 a month at the society's usual 11 per cent rate. At the end of the first 12 months of the fixed rate mortgage the interest rate will change to whatever the going home loan rate is at the time. The Skipton has allocated £50 million of funds to the 9.9 per cent fixed home loan rate package, which, if the success of the Uoyds Bank fixed rate mortgage introduced earlier this year is anything to go by, will be snapped up soon.

The unit trust-type vehicle will remain open for subscription until close to the end of the tax year in April, or until the investment target is achieved. The tax year in April, or until the investment target is achieved. The minimum investment is £3,000, or there is the option of committing £5,000 in three equal instalments. Applications received before September 15 will be free of the front-end charges one associates with unit trusts. After that date subscriptions will attract a fee of 5 per cent, or 3 per cent for subscribers to one of the earlier Alpha schemes. In case you are wondering how Alpha will make any money without charging investors, managers say they may take up some of the more attractive share options on the companies in which the scheme invests.

The M&G Planned Income Portfolio is based on five unit trusts, and providesten income distributions spread over the year. At 18th June 1986 the estimated gross yield on the Portfolio was 5.41%, over 37% higher than that of the F.T. Actuaries All-Share Index. Income is paid net of basic-rate income tax.

The income from the four older trusts in the Portfolio has risen nearly three times since the Extra Yield Fund was launched in 1973. Past performance is no guarantee for the future, but the incoma from this Portfolio is expected to continue growing in future years. With a Bank or Building Society deposit, however, the income can vary only in line with the general level of interest rates.

In addition to generating income totalling £13,583, an investment of £10,000 in these unit trusts on 2nd January 1974 would have grown to £49,799 by 18th June 1986. In contrast a comparable Building Society deposit would still be worth only £10,000 and income from it would have totalled just £11,078 over the same period.

However, you should remember that thap nice of units and the income from them can go down as well as up. This means that unit trusts are a long-term investment and not suitable for money you may need at short notice

The theory is terrific, and not surprisingly more and more children are going away to these American-style camps for a week's holiday at a cost of around £150.

But there is growing disquiet about the standards at these camps. Anyone can set up a children's activity holiday centre without having to register or follow any code or guidelines. Ten years ago the Consumers' Associatioo called for a scheme to register

As a higher rate taxpayer, you will already know about the tax advantages of the Government's Business Expansion Scheme. You will know that you can invest up to f_{1} +0.000 a year in an Inland Revenue approved BES company or fund, and get full income tax relief at your top rate - so that, for example, a 60% taxpayer investing £5,000 will get £3,000 back in tax relief.

But a growing number of experts do not think that this is enough. They are taking an increasingly critical look at the underlying quality. of each BES fund. And at Hoare Octagon, we agree. After all, you have to remember that the tax relief is only given because of the higher level of risk in investment in unquoted companies; and also that, in order to qualify, you must be prepared for your capital to be tied up a for a period of at least five years.

Information Industries Fund, a fund approved by the Inland Revenue to operate within the terms of the Government's Business Expansion Scheme.

Like its three predecessors, its objective is to achieve capital growth that will be outstanding by any standard, irrespective of the tax consideration, over the next five to seven years.

Like its predecessors, it will be invested exclusively in companies involved in the burgeoning information industries. This includes areas such as computer software and services, telecommunications, broadcasting, electronics, publishing and advertising. All will be companies company and our commitment is long term. We are working very closely with all 21 companies in which our previous three funds invested.

Our in-depth knowledge of the sector allows us to contribute more than just money to our chosen companies. And our unique concept of the Octagon Club actively fosters trading links between our investee companies, thus allowing us to help them succeed. Any BES investment can get you 60% tax relief.

Now CGT exemption as well

In his last Budget, the Chancellor announced changes under which BES investments will be exempt from Capital Gains Tax on first disposal in addition to the Income Tax advantages enjoyed by BES investments. This is particularly important to investors in the 4th Hoare Octagon Information Industries Fund - because growth is our principal objective.

The minimum investment is £3,000 and the Fund is limited to a maximum of £2,000,000. An absolute maximum of 666 investors may therefore participate. It is intended that the closing date for subscriptions will be 31st July 1986, but the Fund may be closed earlier if it is oversubscribed. Once the business had got under way and they had started to sell their product they borrowed more money and in the course of their year managed to supplement their allowance with the profits from their cassette racks, and, more importantly, build up a good credit reference with the bank. "It was the bank manager rather than the EAS that we had to convince of the viabili-

This is exactly what hap-pened to David and Elizabeth Holt. who decided at the end of July 1985 to buy a detached house in Wroxham, Norfolk. The Holts had to get the legal side sorted out quickly. They were able to have access to the local searches dated July 12, 1985, which had been mittee confirmed earlier this issued to an earlier proposed purchaser.

The searches, which solicitors send out to the local council, are in a staodard form. One of the questions is directed to the county council in its capacity as the highway authority. The questioo asks whether the council (a) has approved any highway proposals which would involved the acquisitioo of the property, or. (b) has published for the purpose of public consultation any proposals for a new road within 200 metres of the property.

The council had replied "No" to both these inquiries, The results of the rest of the search were also clear.

The Holts exchanged contracts on August 6 but the date of completion was cooditional own local searches. The second standard set of searches was received at the beginning of September. The searches were completely clear and the replies to the road proposal questions were again satisfactory results to their

Mr and Mrs Holt therefore completed their purchase on September 9. On the September 26 the local council published proposals for public consultation for the proposed routes of the Wroxham bypass. There were, in fact, seven different proposed routes. But the council's planniog and transportatioo com-eastern route - the one that would run right through Mr and Mrs Holt's property. Forthermore, Bernard Farrant, a spokesman for Nor-folk County Council, said he has no reason to believe that the full council will not approve the committee's recommended eastern route when it meets at the end of July. Some people may say that Mr and Mrs Holt have been extremely unlucky. If the search had been made just two weeks later, the road proposals would have been published. The reply to the question no the search woold have been "Yes", and Mr and Mrs Holt say they would not have bought the property, even though the final route bad still to be decided

They are extremely dis-traught. Mrs Holt explained: "We bought the property to live in and improve and we have spent £30,000 doing it up. It is a beautiful house and we thought we would be here for many years. Instead the whole of the area will disappear under the tarmac." The Holt's solicitor said: The council should consider disclosing the possibility of a road scheme which substantially affects a property 'as soon as it is 'oo the cards'. By sticking rigidly to the strict letter of the law they are perhaps open to criticism." Bernard Farrant, the council spokesman disagrees: "The sellers' interests have to be looked after as well as those who are buying properties. We have a rolling programme of bypass building, and if we put a note oo the searches oo all the proposed routes, we would blight hundreds of properties. We have to apply the rules and answer the questions asked." Could it be then that it is the questions on the search forms that are at fault? A Law Society spokeswomao said: "The wording oo searches has given rise to problems in the past and is far from ideal. The main problem is that we work together with the local authorities association and they indicate to us what ioquiries they can handle. We have also been pressiog the local authorities to computerize, but so far the of your life. negotiations have come to pretty mucb oothing." While the Law Society is battling to change the system, the Holts are asking the council for reimbursement of £5,000 for the legal fees aod removal expenses for their purchase over and above any compensation in which they may be entitled if they cannot sell the house or if it is purchased by the council.

Their solicitor explained: "The comments made by the couocil rather miss the point. A seller compelled to stay put as a result of a comment on a local search will be entitled to compensation. But the Holts have incurred a great deal of additional expense which they may not be able to recover unless the council agrees."

Buyers should make discreet inquiries

The council has iotimated that the Holts' request will be considered, bot not until September, a whole year after the purchase. Commenting oo the likelihood of reimbursement the cooocil's spokesman said: "It would be a majnr precedent if we were to do it."

The lessoo is: Buyer beware. But purchasers of property can frequently help themselves. Discreet inquiries to the neighbours, local newspapers, or the Citizens' Advice Bureau can often reveal road and planning proposals which are still "io the air", and could stop you from making one of the most expensive mistakes

July 1 in the following year of assessment. Thus in the example of David and Wendy, David's profits for the year to March 31, 1986, would be assessed in 1986-87 and tax would be payable in two equal instalments on January 1, 1987, and July 1, 1987. Wendy, however, would not be assessed on her profits to April 30, 1986, antil 1987-88. and would not be required to pay tax until January Sand July 1 in 1988.

Special rules apply for the opening years on a new busi-ness as it is not possible to use a preceding year as the basis if no preceding year exists. The opening year roles are espe-cially favourable where profits are on a rising trend as the low profits of the early years are assessed several times over.

In the first year of your, business you will be taxed on Self-employment can have perhaps because profits fall during the early years, it is possible to elect to be taxed in great fiscal advantages but the tax rules are complex. The general rule is that your tax inability for any one tax year is based on the profits earned by not only one of them, on the profits actually earned in the your business in the account-ing period ended in the previous tax year.

Again consider the exam For example, If you draw ap of David and Wendy. David began trading on January 1, 1985, and in the first three months to March 31, 1985, For example, if you draw ap your accounts to December 31 every year, your 1985-86 tax liability will be based not on the amount you earn buring the tax year to April 5, 1986, or even on the profits of your business for the year to De-cember 31, 1985, but rather on the your on the your on just managed to break even. Wendy started trading one month later and she soo just managed to break even in her first three months of trading to April 30, 1985. David and Wendy made a profit of just £1200 in the following year but the profits earned in the year to December 31, 1984. This is because December 31, 1984, is in the fax year 1984-85, which is the year made £12.900 in the third year. preceding the year of assessment 1985-86. David would be assessed to tax as fallows. In 1984-85 he monid be taxed on his profits The important thing to remember is that if you want to defer paying tax for as long as possible it is best to draw up to April 5, 1985, but no fiability would arise as his profits were all. 1a 1985-86 he accounts to a date early in the could be assessed on the tax year. Consider the case of David profits of the first 12 months to December 31, 1985, of £900 April 30. As a result David's (three mouths x nil and nine months x £1,200). By 1986-87 he would be on the previous year basis and would be taxed on the profits of the year to March 31, 1986, of £1,200. And David would not be assessed to tax on the profits of £12,000 earned in the year to March 31, 1987, antil the fax year 1987-88.

The position is even more marked in the case of Wendy. She would be assessed in thy in 1984-85 on the profits to April 5, 1985, so, like David, she would have no tax to pay. In 1985-86 she would be taxed on the profits of the first 12 months of trading, which, as for David, would amount to £906. However, unlike in David's case, there is no preceding year by 1986-87 as her first complete accounting year of trading is the year to April 30, 1986, which falls in the tax year 1986-87 and not in the previous tax year 1985-

As a result Wendy will be assessed again on the profits pl the first 12 months of trading of £900. Thereafter Wendy moves on to the preceding year basis and pays tax in 1987-88 on £1.200 and in 1988-89 on £12,000.

How has it fared in practice?

Simply, with conspicuous success.

companies, the USM has proved its worth as a market for capital.

But that's only half the story.

Because at the same time, it has provided equally important new opportunities to investors seeking relatively high-risk investments (because the potential gains are greater) within a properly ordered market.

There is no doubt that many of those who have invested in companies listed on the USM would not have chosen to invest in small, young and largely

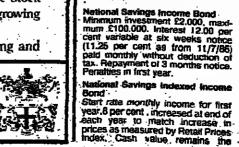

The companies, their workforces, their investors and the country as a whole have all benefited from the USM.

Yet it is only one of many major innovations introduced by The Stock Exchange in the course of the last ten years.

The absence of choice in insurance policies when the mortgage is through a building society was first bighlighted in the 1970s by the Director General of Fair Tradiog. That statutory duly was a continuing one. While the NUM remained the union representing the vast majority of mineworkers, the statutory duty obviously did not require the NCB to enter into consultation with another organization. But in 1985 the UDM emerged. A large number of mineworkers repudiated their membership of the NUM and formed the UDM while joining the scheme.

You probably already realise that you should do something about your pension. Most self-employed know this, but many put it off. One day you will want to retire-you may even have to. The State pension is currently only £38.30 a week. So you will need your own pension, and the sooner you start, the greater the benefits and the happier wou'll be.

With the Sun Alliance Personal Pension Plan, you can build up a worthwhile pension for yourself. It is simple and affordable. The sooner you start, the more it benefits you.

HOW BIG A PENSION?

It depends, of course, on how much yon save and for how long. For example a 34-year-old man who starts. saving £50 a month and continues to age 65 could build up a pension fund of £294,836. He could then have a pension of £44,810 p.a. or take £92,323 as a tax-free lump sum with a reduced pension of £27,503 p.a.+

WHEN SHOULD I START?

The sooner the better. The following illustrations show how a 36-year-old could start to build up a befty pension fund for his retirement. But it could still be £64,545 less than if he'd started at 34.

Example for a man retiring at 65 and paying a premium of £50 gross per month (only £35.50 after tax relief at 29%).+ STARTING AGE 34

Projected Pension

£294.836

To provide a full pension: £44,810 p.a. or hump sum of £92,323 plus a reduced pension of £27,503 p.a.

To provide a full pennion: £34.997 p.a. or hump sum of £72,106 plus a reduced pension of £21,481 p.a.

The final pension may seem high, but remember, if inflation continues at a steady 5% each year, £43,219 will be needed in 30 years' time to provide the spending power of £10,000 today. Sensible pension planning has to take inflation into account.

The mineworkers pension scheme was not part of a collective agreement. It was without question legally enforceable

The NCB's decision to treat the 1946 agreement as ter-minated on May 31, 1986 dissolved the NRT, not only for the purpose of the 1946 scheme, but also for the purpose of but also for the purposes of clause 38 of the pension scheme. His Lordship was prepared to make a declaration to that effect. Notwithstanding that the 1946 scheme was oot legally enforceable, the appoointment of the members of the NRT and the secretary of the NRT to their respective offices was likely to have been made oo a basis that would have entitled them under an implied if not express contract, to look to the NCB and the NUM for payment of their remuneration and expenses.

Nothing io any declaration his Lordship made regarding the dissolution of the NRT should be taken to prejudice any claim by a member or secretary of the NRT to remuneration or expenses.

There were several reasons which justified the NCB in seeking to restrain the further prosecution by the NUM of the references before the NRT.

in which seven out of nine games were alleged to have been fixed. Forty-four goals were scored in the matches — twice the normal number of goals for a single round. The championship was won by Partizan Belgrade, who bent Zelenica Sarajevo 4-0. Red Star Belgrade came second on road avergence after beating goal aggregate after beating Sarajevo with the same score but the feeling among journalists and spectators was that the players had clearly not been playing to win. The 12 teams to be punished

Try To Stop Ne, his mount in the ICI Petrol Handicap, was beaten only a short bead by Freedom's Choice in a better race at York a week ago. However, Duffield will be at the Scottish track principally to partner King Bal-indeer (3.0), High Temion (4.0) and Fleet Footed (5.0) for Gavin Priebert Gordon and all three tomorrow. K-Battery has been running slightly out of his class since winning the William Hill Lincoln at the start of the season but he should not be far away in this more modest company, However, Freedom's Choice, winner of the Michael Sobell Handicap at York last Saturday, Pritchard-Gordon and all three are fancied.

Margam, a late withdrawal from today's big sprint at Ascot, can justify that decision by winning the Daily Express Handicap this evening at War-wick where Span Gold is the form horse for the local Oaks.

WORLD CUP: ENGLAND HAVE THEIR WORK CUT OUT SUBDUING ARGENTINA'S MAIN THREAT

Maradona must be kept in check

From Stuart Jones Football Correspondent Mexico City

One man threatens to tower over the World Cup quarterfinal meeting between En-gland and Argentina in the Azteca stadium tomorrow. Diego Armando Maradona, standing only 5ft 4in, may oot appear to present too substantial a barrier to the ambitions of Bobby Robson's side, but he is a giant of the modern game. With the extraordinary talent that is packed into his powerful frame, he, more than anyone else io the tourna-ment, has the ability to change the destiny of a match. Argentina's captain has explosive speed, delicate balance, fine control and a broad imagination. He is the complete player with only one apparent flaw. Those who watch the tie on television tomorrow evening will ootice that his right foot is employed only for the purpose of mohility. He will rarely bother to touch the ball with it. Yet his left foot is a formidable weapon that can be a steam hammer, a chisel or a scalpel as it inflicts damage. Many may remember a clip on the first day and nurthred later by Small and Gifford. These two went on to play a major role, Gifford boasting a match analysis of seven for 59, and Small five for 100. Yes-terday, Gifford and Kerr, aged 22 and a South African-born off spin bowler who took his chance well to take five for 47 in only his third championship match, shared in a small bowling triumph as seven wickets fell for 39 runs in 11 overs. Warwickshire's batting had given the bowlers a fine opportunity, of course, and in fine setting Glamorgan a target of 406 runs to win, Kallicharran had made a forceful 102 not out, hitting two sizes and ten fours. and there had been telling contributions, too, from Lloyd, Amiss again, and Parsons. Gloucestershire's victory against Kent, whom they beat by four wickets at Gloucester, had been much the doing of Wright, whose vigilance as he piloted his side along an often difficult course enabled him to make 87 of the 227 runs Gloucestershire of the 227 this Cloacestershife needed before bowing ont. Lloyds and the I8-year-old Alleyne, who was making his first appearance, combined to hit off the winning runs. YESTERDAY'S OTHER CRICKET SCOREBOARDS

THE STIMES

SPORT

By John Woodcock, Cricket Correspondent

HEADINGLEY: India, with tified his selection, as be had five second innings wickets in hand, lead England by 240 runs.

Seventeen wickets fell for 209 runs in the second Test match, sponsored by Cornhill, yesterday, 10 of them English, and seven Indian. Even by Headingley standards, that was a bit much. England were bowled out in 45.1 overs for 102, and after tea, India, with a lead of 170, made 70 for five in their second innings. As it so often does here the ball moved all over the place. as much, I think, because of the nvercast weather as for any serious irregularities in the pitch. Batsmen, even the very best of them, have always been hard-pressed to play balls that pitch on or near the middle snd miss the off. Binny was turned into a demon, despite his gentle pace. He had never previously taken more than three wickets in a Test innings. Now, for a song, he took five. That said, England's bats-men would have to admit that they played between them some very poor strokes. None was wilder than Gatting's, and he knew it. Binny had just come on, and Gatting, having crashed his first two balls into the covers, was out in headlong pursuit of the third. Lamb's dismissal, immediately after lunch, did nothing to suggest that England were fighting for their lives. Slack lasted two balls, Gooch 22, Smith 18, Gatting 22, and Lamh 21. Needing a mere 73 to avoid the follow-on, England lost their eighth wicket at 71

To give them their due, the Indians - Kapil Dev and Madan Lal, as well as Binny harnessed the conditions splendidly. I am ashamed to have written before the series began that runs would seldom have been cheaper for English batsmen than against this Indian attack, Yesterday, as at Lord's, this was far from being

However, by taking five wickets when India went in again last night, England are 40 minutes of the day against a still just in the present match, new ball. More hit the first ball should the skies clear - and of the morning, bowled with that is something. by when the new one had been taken, to the midwicket boundary. Lever's two overs never quite done on the first day, when, to his surprise, he cost 16 runs, enough for him to be taken off. Although at was affected by nerves. Bnt as India were not already No.10 for this Indian side, finding batting hard enough, More has a first-class hundred the crowd started during this to his credit, for Baroda in the final session to behave as they Ranji Trophy. For many people, this is the final: a meeting of the two most entertaining teams left in the cap. Brazil and France share something special in sport, something nowadays dead.

There are sound reasons mactical as much as sentime practical as much as sentime-tal, for hoping either of them win. Believe it or not, the game in Brazil needs it. The politicians' wish for a national league during the '70s, super-seding the old regional cham-pionships, diluted the famous clabs of São Paulo and Rio. Every club in this vast country could muster the finance for one or two expensive players, and the clubs such as Santos, São Paulo, Botasogo, Fluminense, and Flamengo no longer had the predom of the best players who formed the national team.

Brazil need to halt decline

No one club has more than three players in the current SCIENC d, and the decline of the top clubs has forced more and more of the best players to go overseas, the way they have for decades from Argentina and Uragmay. I believe that if Brazil are to bid successfully for the World Cup of 1994. worldwide.

CYCLING A first classic victory for ... US newcomer

Zurich (AP) - Andrew Hampsten, from Boulder, Colorado, yesterday upstaged the international elite to capture the fiftieth Tour of Switzerland, the first American to win the road classic.

Hampsten, aged 24, joined the professional circuit only last season. He was in control through the gruelling, 11-day test over 1.767km, although Massimo Ghirotto, of Italy, won the last stage.

A bad spill by Sean Kelly, of -Ireland, No. 1 in the latest world rankings, marred the finale. Kelly received stitches for leg and facial cuts. Team officials assured that his participation in the forthcoming Tour de France was not io
